Why I still contained liquid, I could not begin to fathom. But the two beasts conversed with me in a jovial manner and I did not feel threatened. After some minutes of small-talk, they bade me follow them below decks. I did this with some apprehension, fearing what I would see beneath, but I was surprised to find the interior of the junk to be quite tidy. It was one large hollow cavity and there was indeed some moisture on the ground, but it was unclear what it was, since it had been mostly absorbed by a layer of sawdust. The pile of bodies lay in one corner of the cavity, wrapped neatly in what looked like tinsel. And in the center of the darkened sawdust lay another giant spider, this one a female. While the abdomens of the previous two had certainly been engorged terrifically, the abdomen of this third spider was extended so violently that the sinews which held her exterior together were clearly visible, straining against the interior pressure. Quite certainly, she was pregnant. There was no need for the two arachnids to explain to me the reason for my presence now. I began to roll up my sleeves and, with a deep breath, took steps towards the female.
